SHORTINFO

It all started when Brazil's most talented drummer, Fernando Schaefer (Treta, Kiko Loureiro, Pavilhão 9) decided to launch a new musical apocalypse onto an unsuspecting world. Endrah is brutality, with the ability to fuse the speed and technicality of death metal with the attitude of hardcore.

The band's debut, DEMONstration (2004) was produced and mixed by Billy Graziadei (Biohazard) at Underground Sound studios. Billy was so blown away by the sound that he soon joined the band, bringing his wife and child to live in Brazil!

The EP received a great response from all the big names in the metal scene, time and time again people commented on the amazing musical prowess of the band. Other musical duties meant that Billy had to return to the States, with the band returning to their original format of using just one guitar.

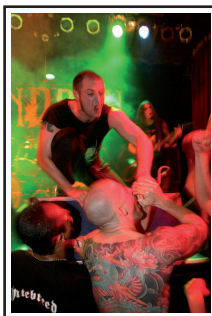

Shortly before recording their debut full-length the vocalist also decided to leave the band. Word was put out via the internet and soon people were contacting them from all over the globe in the hope of joining the band. The man for the job was Relentless, from San Francisco. The resulting CD provides evidence that this is the start of something big. Endrah coming through - unstoppable!

Check out the statement from Billy as well:

During some time off between Biohazard albums/tours, I moved to Brazil with my wife to welcome our daughter into this chaotic world. While there I became good friends with some fellow musicians who I met through the Sepultura crew. Fernandao Schaefer (THE most insanely intense and talented drummer I've ever played with) and I spent some time jamming together in the studio. I left for another tour with Biohazard. Fernandao went on to form what would eventually become ENDRAH and recorded a short demo that he gave to me when I returned to Brazil. After hearing what they were kicking out, I joined the group as a second guitar player and producer. We recorded our first demo entitled DemonStration in Brazil and I brought the tapes back to the States to finish mixing the album. For the first time in my career I felt completely challenged as a guitar player, writing and touring Brazil with these guys was an awesome experience. With the distance between us, touring with my new band SUICIDE CITY, it became more and more difficult to continue with ENDRAH. I chose to leave the band in order not to hold them back in their plans to move ENDRAH further along. Not only a proud xmember of Endrah, I am a fan and continue to support the band in all that they do. ENDRAH will beatdown all that step!
